Statistics show that 45% of the children of Nepal can never go to school

Children should take a book in hand before they grab a tool.

In Nepal, one of the world's poorest countries, child labour is widespread.

It is estimated that half of all children under 15 years must work instead of going to school.

This is one of the highest rates of child labour in Asia..

Children in Nepal work in agriculture, as a valet in the textile and carpet production, in quarries and on construction sites.

Girls are sold in large cities in Nepal or India, where they get into forced prostitution.
